OVER 50 YEARS OF SERVICE TO LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

History

The ten Planning and Development Districts in Mississippi were established in the late 1960s to support local governments in addressing challenges that extend across jurisdictional boundaries. Their formation was guided by technical assistance from the Office of Federal-State Programs under the administration of Governor John Bell Williams, along with support from various business development organizations. Federal matching grants were made available to both the Districts and local governments, contingent upon meeting and maintaining specific eligibility requirements, particularly in the area of economic development.

In 1971, to promote consistency in economic development and regional planning boundaries, Governor Williams issued Executive Order 81, formally designating the Planning and Development Districts as the state's official sub-state regions. The Order also identified the Districts as the primary entities responsible for ensuring that regional projects and programs are developed through a coordinated, long-range, and continuous planning process. While participation remained largely voluntary, the Districts were tasked with improving communication and coordination across jurisdictions, thereby reducing duplication and increasing efficiency.

Organization

Each Planning and Development District operates as an independent organization governed by a Board of Directors appointed by local leadership. The Board includes representatives from each county within the District and is composed of elected officials, business and industry leaders, and members representing minority communities.

Most Districts utilize an active committee structure that often includes participants beyond the Board of Directors, allowing for broader input and engagement. Day-to-day operations are managed by an Executive Director who reports to the Board. District staff typically include administrative and clerical personnel, as well as professionals with expertise in areas such as planning, geographic information systems, economic and community development, grant administration, workforce development, social services, transportation, data management, and aging services.

While each District serves a unique region with its own priorities and needs, resulting in some variation in activities and initiatives, all Districts provide a core set of programs and services in a generally consistent manner across the state.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Economic development is a central function of each Planning and Development District. Each District is designated by either the Economic Development Administration (EDA) of the U.S. Department of Commerce or the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) as the federally recognized entity responsible for regional economic development planning and related activities. Additional support is provided through agencies such as USDA Rural Development, and more recently, the Delta Regional Authority, which utilizes the same sub-state structure. Rather than approaching economic development narrowly, the Districts focus on fostering long-term job creation and sustainable regional growth.

Each District prepares an annual Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy (CEDS), a key requirement for maintaining eligibility for a range of federally funded programs. These programs primarily support local governments in developing critical public infrastructure such as roads, water and sewer systems, and industrial sites necessary to attract and retain business and industry. A significant number of industrial parks across Mississippi have been developed with federal assistance facilitated through the Planning and Development Districts. Continued eligibility for these programs also provides access to technical assistance, grant funding, and various loan opportunities.

In addition to infrastructure development, the Districts engage in a wide range of economic development activities that may vary by region. They provide data analysis, demographic and economic information, and site development support to prospective businesses and industries. The Districts also assist local governments in strengthening their competitiveness and building capacity to support economic growth. Notably, the Planning and Development Districts were among the first organizations in Mississippi to integrate Geographic Information Systems (GIS) into routine data management and mapping, enhancing their ability to support informed decision-making.

LOAN PROGRAMS

All Planning and Development Districts administer active Revolving Loan Fund (RLF) programs. These programs are capitalized through grants from various federal agencies and are used often in partnership with other public or private financing to provide loans to businesses and industries for start-ups and expansions. Offered at competitive rates, these loans are repaid and reinvested, allowing the funds to be continuously reused to support additional commercial and industrial development. This revolving structure ensures that capital remains within the region, making it a sustainable and effective economic development tool.

In addition, the Districts participate in the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) 504 Loan Program. Acting as, or in partnership with, a Certified Development Company (CDC), each District facilitates long-term financing typically up to 20 years for small businesses to acquire land, buildings, and other fixed assets. These loans are structured to promote job creation and business expansion and are delivered in collaboration with private lenders, which generally provide approximately half of the total project financing. The SBA guarantees the District's portion of the loan, reducing risk and enabling favorable, fixed interest rates.

The Districts also help administer state-supported financing programs, including the Mississippi Minority Business Enterprise Loan Program and the Mississippi Small Business Assistance Loan Program. The former targets minority- and women-owned businesses, while the latter is available to small businesses across the state, further expanding access to capital and supporting economic growth.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Community development is another key area of involvement for most Planning and Development Districts. A primary funding source is the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program, administered by the Mississippi Development Authority through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. This highly competitive program supports a wide range of public infrastructure and economic development projects.

Districts play a critical role in assisting local governments throughout the CDBG process, including project identification, application preparation, and documentation of community needs. In many cases, Districts also provide grant administration services after funding is awarded, ensuring compliance and effective project implementation.

Beyond CDBG, Districts support communities in accessing additional funding and technical assistance from a variety of sources. These include USDA Rural Development programs for infrastructure and community facilities, U.S. Department of the Interior programs for park development, and Federal Highway Administration programs for trail development both of which are administered at the state level by the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks. Districts also assist with funding opportunities for small municipalities and low-population counties, as well as grant programs supporting rural volunteer fire departments, further strengthening local capacity and quality of life.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

In addition to administering federal and state funding programs, the Planning and Development Districts provide a wide range of technical assistance to help local governments strengthen management and operations. This support includes financial management, budgeting, and capital improvement planning. Many Districts also offer advanced demographic analysis to assist with redistricting efforts, along with Geographic Information Systems (GIS) and computer mapping capabilities. Some Districts maintain extensive technology and communications infrastructure to support data sharing and network expansion. When specialized expertise is not available in-house, Districts coordinate with state and federal partners or collaborate with other Districts to ensure communities have access to the resources they need.

PLANNING ASSISTANCE

The Districts play an important role in both local and regional planning. Maintaining a regional planning process is a federal requirement for certain funding programs, and the Districts ensure that this process is in place to preserve eligibility for their service areas. The level of planning activity varies by region, often reflecting local needs and available expertise. In metropolitan areas that receive federal transportation funding, the Districts administer the required metropolitan planning process, ensuring that state and federal investments are aligned with locally adopted plans.

Districts also assist cities and counties with the development of comprehensive plans, as well as the preparation and administration of zoning ordinances and subdivision regulations. These efforts support orderly growth, infrastructure coordination, and long-term community development.

HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT

Human resource development has become an increasingly important focus for the Districts, reflecting the understanding that investments in infrastructure must be matched by investments in people. Workforce development is a key component, with the Districts participating in multi-county workforce regions established under the Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA). In this role, they help assess regional workforce needs, develop annual training plans, and support funding for workforce initiatives. These efforts are carried out in coordination with the Mississippi Department of Employment Security and informed by input from the business and industry community.

Districts also serve as Area Agencies on Aging, developing annual plans that guide the use of federal funding for services to older adults. These plans are based on needs assessments, demographic data, national priorities, and public input, and they direct service delivery across each District. Core services include congregate and home-delivered meals, information and referral, long-term care support, and elder abuse prevention.

Increasing emphasis has been placed on helping older adults remain in their homes and communities. To support this goal, Districts coordinate a range of services, including homemaker assistance, adult day care, transportation, employment programs, case management, and other community-based supports. The use of Medicaid Waiver programs for home- and community-based services has been particularly significant, enabling individuals to receive care at home rather than in institutional settings, often improving quality of life while reducing costs. For those residing in long-term care facilities, Districts operate ombudsman programs that provide advocacy and oversight through trained professionals.

The Future

Over the past five decades, the roles and responsibilities of the Planning and Development Districts have evolved substantially, and this evolution is expected to continue as they respond to emerging regional needs and priorities. Their strength lies in their flexibility, regional perspective, and ability to integrate a wide range of programs and services. By combining sound business practices with public sector responsibilities, the Districts remain well-positioned to support initiatives ranging from basic community services to large-scale infrastructure development, ensuring their continued relevance and impact in the years ahead.
